

“Our rising generation is worthy of our best efforts to support and strengthen them in their journey to adulthood. . . In every action we take, in every place we go, with every Latter-day Saint young person we meet, we need to have an increased awareness of the need for strengthening, nurturing, and being an influence for good in their lives.”
-Elder Ronald A. Rasband of the Presidency of the Seventy

“To nurture means to cultivate, care for, and make grow. . . . Nurturing requires organization, patience, love, and work. Helping growth occur through nurturing is truly a powerful and influential role bestowed on women.”
-Julie B. Beck, Relief Society general president

“Our rising generation is worthy of our best efforts to support and strengthen them in their journey to adulthood. . . In every action we take, in every place we go, with every Latter-day Saint young person we meet, we need to have an increased awareness of the need for strengthening, nurturing, and being an influence for good in their lives.”
-Elder Ronald A. Rasband of the Presidency of the Seventy

“To nurture means to cultivate, care for, and make grow. . . . Nurturing requires organization, patience, love, and work. Helping growth occur through nurturing is truly a powerful and influential role bestowed on women.”
-Julie B. Beck, Relief Society general president

“Our rising generation is worthy of our best efforts to support and strengthen them in their journey to adulthood. . . In every action we take, in every place we go, with every Latter-day Saint young person we meet, we need to have an increased awareness of the need for strengthening, nurturing, and being an influence for good in their lives.”
-Elder Ronald A. Rasband of the Presidency of the Seventy

“To nurture means to cultivate, care for, and make grow. . . . Nurturing requires organization, patience, love, and work. Helping growth occur through nurturing is truly a powerful and influential role bestowed on women.”
-Julie B. Beck, Relief Society general president

